VERMONT'S GREAT HENNERY

Largest Industry of Its Kind in New England

Two Thirteen-cent Patients on Hill Farm Near Burlington Care for 3,000 Pigs and Make Money Regaining Health.

Vermont has the largest henry in New England. It is on a hill farm near Rutland, and is successfully managed by two young people, Miss Sarah H. Wells of New York and Henry W. Dunton of Rutland. The Free Press in its special description of this industry some time ago said: "A fine roofing." This is indeed a great roofing, and it is planned to receive a heavy coating of paint. It has a real mineral surface. This surface is embedded under tremendous pressure into a layer of Coal Tar Pitch—the greatest waterproofing compound known. This mineral surface needs no painting.

Any practical man, as soon as he sees a sample showing this mineral surface, gets interested. A lot of time and money are wasted yearly in painting roofs.

You can get a sample of Amatite by simply asking for it. Address the nearest office of the Barron Manufacturing Company, New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston, St. Louis, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Kansas City, Minneapolis or New Orleans.

From the Brattleboro Reformer:

The dim and distant future will take its place in the shadowy and historic past long before the people of Vermont will forget the Legislature of 1908 with its almost numberless signs of omission and comicality. They are gone now but not forgotten by their constituents. Their record of things done and left undone, of platforms plied and promises unkept, remains a vivid reminder of the wisdom which the session cost the State. The men who tried to gain election to the Legislature and failed are resulting sincere contributions upon their fortunes escape.

Considerable, for instance, is the fact that the legislature had a few days ago passed a bill which did not do what it intended. Think of the time it spent in doing it, the expense of fixing it, the time it spent in getting it through the Legislature, and the amount of time it took to get it through.
